The Asian Development Bank Institute, or ADBI, recently published a report highlighting that efficient bank and financial institutions were the underpinnings of successful integration amongst the region’s capital markets.

The report emphasised the diverse size of each of the member state’s various banking system, the lack of similarity in their provision of domestic credit, and disparities in the quality of their equity and bond markets.

Whilst Malaysia and Indonesia compared favourably with their international peers, states such as Brunei, Cambodia, the Lao PDR, and Myanmar were listed as countries with a significant lack of development in their financial infrastructure.

Another key highlight of the report concerned itself with the ratio of deposit accounts to population, which reflect the existence of savings and liquidity within financial markets; based on 2010 data, both Singapore and Malaysia led the region in deposit accounts with 2134 and 1620 accounts per every 1000 adults respectively.
Market sentiment remained wary after Monday's rout, as disappointing corporate earnings, a weaker ringgit, lower commodity prices and cooling factory orders in China and the eurozone kept investors mostly on the sidelines.

- Domestic consumption and investment growth are to slow due to fiscal restraint, prudent monetary policy and a maturing credit cycle,” said the bank’s Asian Economic Outlook 2015-2016.
- Year-to-date, the US dollar has strengthened 4.59% against the ringgit and investors are now worried that the country could face the spectre of a twin deficit next year.
- Expectation that lower crude oil prices will lower production cost hence allow consumers to enjoy a higher income, is hampered by the fact that

Finance Minister Sommai Phasee initially planned to increase the VAT by 1% in 2015 in order to increase the fiscal budget by 12-13%, an announcement that was met with widespread concern amongst businesses as Thailand attempts to recover from political strife.

- Presently, consumer confidence within Thailand has experienced moderate to weak recovery following the political deadlock that plagued the nation’s economy; coupled with the additional household debt incurred by families during the crisis, any additional taxes upon the people can be viewed to be detrimental to the recovering econom
- The Joint Standing Committee on Commerce, Industry and Banking (JSCCIB) currently forecasts between 3.5% to 4% in economic growth for 2015, a number that reflects delays in the disbursement of the Thai government’s budget and slow pace of economic recovery.
- The move towards increasing the VAT has also been shadowed by the 10% reduction in corporate income tax, a fiscal policy decision that many have stated will only benefit a few individuals whilst not actually addressing fundamental fiscal issues within the nation

Malaysia is an exporter of oil and gas. Subsequent to this event, it will affect the aggregate demand and slightly trim the national revenue.

- For next year, the research forecasts a 7% earnings-per-share growth on a pick-up in corporate earnings, with a focus on growth stocks that create shareholder value, over and above defensive and yield stocks; hence assets are where investors could currently focus on.

Almost 20 per cent of Filipinos living in the UAE are planning to buy a property in the Philippines within a year, according to a new survey. The survey revealed that five out of 10 Filipinos were prioritising property investment and found cities such as Bonifacio Global City, Makati and Metro Manila attractive for investment.

- Investing in Philippine property today is ideal for Filipino and international investors as prices are likely to soar substantially in the coming years,” said Karen Remo, managing director of New Perspective Media
- Global financial institutions and analysts forecast good investment returns in the Philippines, which is one of Asia’s most steady economies. Majority of overseas Filipinos say they are looking at buying property back home for their families, or as an investment, in the coming 12 months.

- The property event comes about as Philippines is witnessing a stable property market with high appreciation and rental yields coupled with low interest rate and flexible financing terms. Backed by a strong economy, a young and growing population and increasing income, the Philippines is Southeast Asia’s strongest performing economy and is among the fastest growing residential market.
- They are also one of the world’s top 10 fastest growing luxury property markets and has higher rental yields compared to other Asian countries. The property sector’s growth is expected to remain robust.

06 MYANMAR’S ROLE IN EASING TENSION DURING THE ASEAN SUMMIT

ASEAN ✶ MYANMAR

International investors will have to wait at least 10 months for Vietnam to ease curbs on foreign shareholders after a 2013 proposal to increase ownership limits was shelved. Policy makers must revise a Ministry of Finance plan that recommended lifting the foreign cap on voting shares in some industries to 60 percent from 49 percent.

- Vu Bang, Chairman of the State Securities Commission (SSC), said in an interview on November 28. Bang, who had said in February that the government was in the “last stage” of making a decision on the proposal, now says a new version will be submitted in October.

- Speculation that ownership limits for the US$56 billion stock market would be raised helped boost the benchmark Vietnam Ho Chi Minh Stock Index (VNINDEX) by 22 percent in 2013 and another 13 percent this year. Money managers, including Templeton Asset Management and Dragon Capital Group Ltd., have said they’re unable to buy as many shares as they want because of the caps.

- “This is disappointing as the market has been rallying because investors were expecting the increase in the limit this year,” Attila Vajda, Managing Director at Project Asia Research & Consulting Pte., said. It will probably take until 2016 at the earliest for a revised plan to get final approval, Vajda said.

- The SSC will work with relevant ministries to revise the plan and address inconsistencies with existing laws, Bang said. He said an increase in foreign limits will be implemented “eventually” while declining to provide details of the new proposal. The plan will need approval from Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung.

07 CAMBODIAN PM DEFENDS AUSTRALIAN REFUGEE DEAL

AUSTRALIA ✶ CAMBODIA

Prime Minister Hun Sen continues to affirm Cambodia’s deal with Australia regarding the housing of refugees turned away from Australian sanctuary; the $35 million resettlement program has raised concerns over the social and economic costs incurred in the sheltering of refugees.

- In addition to those concerns, the US Based Human Rights Watch has continued to call for the program to be suspended until Cambodia improves its refugee support system; Prime Minister Hun Sen cited the successful resettlement of 85 asylum seekers in an earlier 2009 program as proof that the country was willing and able to undertake any and all refugees redirected from Australia.

- Currently, the resettlement program involves Australia funding the accommodation and resettlement services for refugees going to Cambodia for a one year duration with the option to extend said funding; furthermore, Australia has promised to provide health insurance for resettled refugees for a total of five years.

- Refugees sent to Cambodia are however limited in a socioeconomic sense as they are only issued “Prakas”, interim documents that do not qualify for a refugee to open a bank account and other essential purposes.

POLITICS

- National League for Democracy (NLD) chairwoman Aung San Suu Kyi has called for government inaction for a recent fatal shooting at the Letpadaung copper mine in central Myanmar. One villager was killed and 20 others, including 11 policemen, were injured on 22 December in a confrontation at the mine when the police and Chinese workers erected a fence on land that the villagers claimed as theirs.

The Irrawaddy (29 December 2014)

- Yangon held the first municipal elections since 1949 on 27 December, with voters hoping for change despite knowing little about the candidates or their policies. For many the battle for the Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC) is the first chance to vote under the country’s quasi-civilian government, which replaced outright military rule in 2011. But restrictions on who can vote mean that just 400,000 of the city’s several million residents can cast ballots, while other clauses have strictly controlled who can stand for the YCDC. Voter turnout was only around 20%.

ECONOMY

- To ensure a sustainable eco-system, Myanmar has set an annual limit of 1.16 million tons of timber for future demand despite annual increase in both local and foreign consumption. Logging in the 2013-14 fiscal year totalled 925,050 tons, while annual production for the current fiscal year of 2014-15 is at 730,000 tons.

Xinhua (29 December 2014)

- The Yangon-Mandalay highway will be upgraded to a world-class eight-lane road through the build-operate-transfer (BOT) system and tender will be opened for both local and foreign companies, according to the Ministry of Construction. The highway connecting Yangon, Mandalay and Naypyidaw has made headlines frequently for causing many fatal accidents.

Eleven Myanmar (29 December 2014)

- Till third week of December, Myanmar’s trade volume has become nearly US$2 billion - only five billion dollars short from the estimated trade volume of this fiscal year which ends 31 March, according to the Ministry of Commerce. During this period, average trade volume of a month was over US$2.2 billion and if this goes on, trade volume of this FY might exceed the estimated volume.

The Nation (29 December 2014)

- Rice shipments across the Sino-Burmese border, considered illegal in China, accounted for more than two-thirds of total rice exports over the last nine months, according to the Myanmar Ministry of Commerce. Chit Khine, chairman of the Myanmar Rice Federation (MRF), said Myanmar’s rice exports across the Sino-Burmese border constituted the highest bilateral trade total, despite a Chinese ban on Myanmar rice imports. China banned rice imports from Myanmar earlier this year demanding a trade agreement guaranteeing that most rice is milled and meets quality standards.

THAILAND RECOGNISES MALAYSIA’S ROLE IN THE PEACE PROCESS

Speaking to Malaysian reporters after hosting a luncheon in honour of visiting Thai Prime Minister Gen Prayuth Chan-o-cha, Malaysian Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Razak said Thailand recognises Malaysia’s role in the Southern Thailand peace process and has vowed to give a firm commitment towards the effort.

- Malaysia and Thailand would reinvigorate the peace process and restart the efforts based on the three principles discussed; period of no violence and respect for the law, all parties be represented in the peace process and they must agree to the list of demands or requests that they wished to put forward to the Thai government.

- “Based on the three principles, Malaysia will continue the peace process and the Thai government has stated categorically that Malaysia is the only country that they will work with in the peace process,” Najib said.

- Besides, Najib pointed out that Malaysia and Thailand have agreed to strengthen cooperation in addressing the problem of extremism, militancy and dual citizenship which are the long-standing problems in both countries.

SINGAPORE TO SEE VIRTUAL MODEL PROJECT BEGIN IN 2017

The National Research Foundation’s US$58 million project will map out the entire city within a 3D model for knowledge sharing and community sharing.

- The US$58 million will go towards the development of the platform, as well as research into latest technologies and advanced tools over a period of five years, which will begin operations in 2017.

- The 3D map will have uses within public, private, and research contexts; from potential map applications, simulations of traffic and crowd behaviour, to other geo-spatial data applications, the project hopes to improve the lives of Singaporeans in more than one way.

- A key concern to the collection of such data would be the breach of privacy rights relating to land and buildings; the NRF has in turn guaranteed that safeguards will be put in place to prevent the leaking of sensitive information which will be collected through the project.
