01 THAI JUNTA INSTIGATES CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM

Thailand's Proposed Constitutional Changes

1

Proportional Voting System to Support Smaller Parties/ Coalition Governments

2

Past Political Involvement

3

Appointed, Unelected officials in the Upper House

OECD, Southeast Asia Investment Policy Perspectives December 2014

The military run government, which currently operates under a temporary charter, submitted a recent draft outlining key changes to the previously abolished Thai constitution.

▶ Following the appointment of a Constitution Drafting Committee, Thailand's current administration has drafted a full fledged constitution with key provisions reforming fundamental voting procedures and the role and regulations surrounding the military's involvement in the nation's political affairs; in essence, Thai generals involved in the coup of May 2014 are to be pardoned, whilst coalition governments and smaller parties are to be encouraged

▶ Under the new draft, elections will be decided by a proportional representation system designed to better support smaller parties and coalition governments; amongst controversial provisions tied to the country's new electoral system, the upper house will be filled with appointments rather than elected officials, a system which commentators have dubbed as prone to larger fractures within the political landscape and misrepresentation

▶ The constitutional draft, which is slated to be debated for a week before being made official also seeks the opinion of constituents through a thousand selected respondents from each of Thailand's 77 provinces; a referendum will however not be carried out to officiate the constitution

02 VIETNAM DEREGULATES FOREIGN OWNERSHIP IN BANKS

According to the newly proposed foreign ownership cap, foreign investors will be allowed to own in excess of 30% in Vietnamese Banks, a decree which should facilitate the influx of FDI.

▶ Current regulations cap total foreign shareholdings for banks at 30%, whilst individual foreign strategic investors are capped at 20%, and non strategic investors face a 15% limit; the policies put in place are designed to protect national interests in Vietnam, whilst maintaining financial sovereignty and independence of the nation

▶ The move comes at a time when the current administration is aggressively deregulating foreign ownership in strategically targeted markets; in April alone, the Vietnamese government announced the removal of foreign ownership restrictions on property

▶ However, with regional neighbours currently boasting higher rates of return relative to Vietnam, the question of whether foreign investors will shift their funds into a nation with robust yet unproven growth prospects has yet to be answered

03 MALAYSIA POISED TO BECOME MAJOR RENMINBI CLEARING CENTRE

Malaysia is poised to become a major offshore renminbi (RMB) clearing centre for the ASEAN region following the appointment of Bank of China Malaysia as the clearing bank for the RMB currency.

▶ The opening of an RMB clearing bank will benefit both Malaysia and China mainly because: 1) China is one of the largest trading partner for ASEAN region; 2) the rise of RMB and its increasing recognition as a major global trade settlement currency; 3) direct trade settlement within the region is better facilitated especially between Malaysia and China; 4) lower transaction costs that benefit both China and ASEAN together; and lastly 5) it is a critical financial initiative, that would enhance ties between Malaysia and China further, said Prime Minister Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak

▶ Prime Minister Najib said "Most importantly, it shows not only when Malaysia and China, but also when ASEAN and China act together, it is for the mutual benefit and prosperity of everyone in the region

▶ On a side note, regarding the Malaysia-China ties, Najib said Malaysia was looking into the possibility of setting up new direct flights between Malaysia and China linking Malacca to Guangdong, conducting the first combined military exercise between the two countries as well as building new railways, ports and industrial parks together

▶ "We also support China's efforts to promote an inclusive regional growth agenda through a series of initiatives from the Asian Investment Infrastructure Bank to the 21st century Maritime Silk Road, both of which are expected to increase investment flow into the ASEAN region," Najib said

04 INDONESIA IS CRACKING DOWN ON ALCOHOL SALES

Indonesia on Thursday banned small retailers from selling beer, despite an outcry from the booze industry and in tourism hotspots over the Muslim-majority country's latest offensive against drinking.

▶ There had been particular anxiety about how the ban might affect tourism on the Hindu-majority resort island of Bali. However, Trade Minister Rachmat Gobel has now pledged to ease the restrictions on the island to ensure street vendors can still sell beer at the beach, but doesn't apply to all such as the convenience stores and small retailers

▶ The national ban is the latest sign that conservative forces in the country of 250 million people are pushing back against growing alcohol consumption, and comes the same week that Islamic parties in the world's most populous Muslim-majority nation proposed a total ban on drinking

▶ The trade ministry has justified the ban on sales at small retailers on health and moral grounds, as concerns grow that underage drinking is being fuelled by wide availability in local neighbourhoods

▶ The health advocates are concerned and warn it could drive more drinkers to black-market spirits, high-potency concoctions sold illegally on the street that kill an untold number of drinkers every year
